THE NINTH AVENUE COMPANY'S RIGHTS. THE NINTH AVENUE COMPANY'S RIGHTS. A temporary injunction was granted yesterday by Justice Donohue, in the Supreme Court, Chambers, restraining the Mayor and Aldermen and Hubert D. Thompson, Commissioner of Public Works, from taking any steps to prevent the Ninth Avenue Railway Company from laying its track along the Boulevard between Sixty-fourth-st, and the Harlem River. It is alleged in the papers upon which the injunction was granted that in 1853 William Radford and others secured the right by a resolution of the Board of Aldermen to build a railway from Fifty-first-st, and Ninth-ave, to Gausevoort-st, thence to Greenwich-st, and thence to Battery-

Radiord and others secured the right by a resolution of the Board of Aldermen to build a railway from Fifty-first-st. and Ninth-ave. to Gansevoort-st., thence to Greenwich-st., and thence to Battery-place and through Washington-st. back to the place of starting. It was also provided that the road could be extended from Fifty-first-st. through the Bloomingdale Road and Tenth ave. to the Harlem River when the streets in toat part of the city hal been graded. The road has already extended to Sixty-fourth-st., and it is asserted that public convenience requires that it be now extended to the Harlem River. In March last application was made to the Commissioner of Public Works for permission to tear up the streets for the purpose of layir; the track. The application was denied in June. The iplaintiffs thereupon sent indice to the Commissioner that they should lay the track without his permission, as their right to do so was absolute. The Commissioner sent, back notice that he should cause the arrest of every workman found engaged in learing up the streets without a proper permit. The order to show cause granted by Justice Doaohue is returnable on Monday next.

An officer of the company said last night that the work would probably be under way in a short time but that nothing positive could be asserted until advice was received from John Scribner, jr., the attrincy for the company, who is not now in the attrincy for the company, who is not now in the attrincy for the company, who is not now in the attrincy for the company, who is not now in the attrincy for the company, who is not now in the attrincy for the company, who is not now in the attrincy for the company was not now in the city. The claim of the Commissioner was understood to be that the charrer under which the company assumes the right to extend its line was granted more than twenty years ago; and also that since the privilege bestowed upon the company was to lay its tracks through Broadway, no right accross to it to make use of the widened and improved thor

ANOTHER UNSOLVED MURDER MYSTERY.

Coroner Merkle held an inquest yesterday afternoon in the case of the anknown Jew who was found with his throat cut in Pleasant-ave, near Dne-hundred-aud-twelfth-st., on Angust 6. Policeman William Reagan testified as to finding the body. He snid there were no signs of there having been any sendle. The body was lying in the dust in the middle of the road. A razor lay a few feet to one side, naving a little blood on the handle. The clothing of the man was in part covered with mud, but not at all torn or disturbed, and his hat, lying near, was perfectly clean. Deputy Coroner Messemer stated that he had examined the body and found the throat cut all the way around to the spinal column. There was also a large bruise over the left temple, He said that it could not have been a case of suicide, as it would have been impossible for the man to have inflicted the bruise on the temple after the throat was cut, or to have cut his throat with the razor after fracturing the temple. There were no rocks or stones near the spot where the body was found by winch the bruise could have been inflicted. Several persons living by testified that they had heard no noise or ANOTHER UNSOLVED MURDER MYSTERY. the body was found by winch the bruise could have been inflicted. In accordance with the Coroner's instructions the jury rendered a verdict that the man came to his death from injuries inflicted by mknown persons. unknown persons.

If every piece of steel were actually in the bridge-yard the trusses could be put up in three months. Had the bridge been built of iron there would have been no delay in supplying the missing pieces, as we could buy them at some other mall; but being of steel this cannot be done. I am wen aware that Mr. Schers has had carraordinary difficulties to overcome in the manufacture of the various shapes we have required, and I make no delays incident to that source. It is avoidable delays winten are so galling and costly. The specifications for the terminal structures on the bridge are now ready. It will take one year from the time this contract is given out to complete these structures. To get up the rope driving machinery will take over a year. Besides erecting the trusses of the superstructure there is much other work which will go on at the same time. The whole superstructure has to be riveted together and regulated, and the over and under floor stays put up. The hoors have to be inid and the whole structure painted several times. After all the weight is on the suspenders and easy must be finally adjusted before the moving load can be let on. Mr. Murphy's weekly report of the work done last week showed that "the last of the floor beams belonging to the slip joints and just received from Edgemoor have been put in place; also, eighty-seven intermediate floor beams have been put up. All the intermediate floor beams required for the bridge, except one, have now been received. Fifty-eight bridging trusses have been creeted in scattered lots. Forty-one promenade floor beams have been put in place and in order. The balance of the over floor stay from have been placed in the top of the towers ready for the attachment of over floor stays. Six of the large under floor stays, forming a portion of the system of stays designed to prevent any lateral motion of the bridge, have been placed, and the rest will be put up as fast as the trusses are completed."

Isaac, Samuel J. and Jacob A. Steinau, composing the Brm of Steinau Brothers & Co., wholesale dealers in jewelry and fancy goods, made an assignment yesterday to Max Scheuer, giving preferences for $25,958 43. The firm claim that their failure was the result of the dishouesty of one of their clerks, Charles F. Hamilton, whom they had arrested. Yesterday Hamilton pleaded guilty in the Court of General Sessions to forgery in the third degree, having forged the name of Isaac Steinau to four checks on the Chatham National Bank aggregating $180 on his private account. Although this was the specific offence for which Hamilton was indicted, Mr. Steinau, in conversation with the Judge, claumed that their books showed that Hamilton had taken from $6,000 to $5,000 belonging to the firm. Hamilton was sentenced to two years' imprisonment in the Penitentiary. The liabilities of the firm are about $54,000, of which over $25,000 is for borrowed money, and is all preferred. It is thought that the assets are about $37,000. Isaac and Samuel J. Steinau were formerly in business in Cincinnati in the firm of C. J. Steinau & Brother, and came to New-York in August, 1879, claiming a capital of $18,000. J. A. Stein au was admitted in June, 1880, and they then ciaimed a capital of $25,000.

A PROTEST BY FIFTY MILKMEN. A PROTEST BY FIFTY MILKMEN.

A so-called "mass meeting of the milk-dealers of New-York and vicinity" was held yesterday afternoon at Pytnagoras Hall in Canal-st. About fifty dealers were present. It is estimated that there are nearly one thousand in the city and vicinity.

George Dainty said that the object of the meeting was to take some organized action against the unjust course of the inspectors appointed by the Board of Health, who acted without judgment, and were often guided by malice; they would condemn good milk as well as that which was bad, and often throw out cans of milk without trying their

He thought an unjust discrimination was made against the milk-dealers; there was no more adulteration in milk than in sugar, whiskey or any other article of trade. "Five years ago this law was passes, prosecute one class of citizens—it does not apply to others. We are not 'baby poisoners.' We are honest men, but sometimes we get adulterated milk from the farmer. That is not our fault. Often we are in such a hurry to get to the city to supply our customers, that we do not examine to supply our customers, that we do not examine to see whether the milk is pure or not. We are stopped an hour or two by the inspector, who, perhaps, finds a bad can that has been smuggied upon us, and then we are held up as criminals. We are not puter than other men, but we do not wish to be hounded as criminals and have our milk thrown into the streets by men who act from malice alone. This lactometer is not a success. If we put a piece of ice in the milk to preserve it, the lactometer condemns it, and not only that can, but others are thrown out by the prosecuting inspectors." Mr. Dainty was elected chairman of the meeting, A. Howell secretary, and G. N. Scarle treasurer.

Mr. Shaeller then spoke briefly, condemning the alleged injustice to the dealers. Mr. Howell said: "We do not complain of the law, but of the incompetent men who are appointed to enferce it. These 'lunkhead' inspectors, who are actuated by captice, throw out the milk without giving it a fair examination with their lactometer. If they threw out only bad milk we would not say a word, but it is the condemning of the good milk which we complain of." Mr. Howell offered a resolution in favor of action to prevent "the indiscriminate destruction of our property by the Board of Health without a fair trial," and recommending that "competent officers be appointed, who will not condemn without a fair examination." This was acopted, and the meeting adjourned, subject to a call from the Chair.

THE FEAST OF ST. ROCCO.

Jersey-si, was brilliantly illuminated last night. Chinese lanterns hung from all the little iron balcomes and candles flickered on every narrow window-sill. Italians thronged the short street, and the windows were filled with their dark faces. There was much merry-making, it being one of the great festive occasions in the Italian calendar—the Feast of St. Rocco. It began on Tuesday and ended last night. In one of the court-yards a grand altar had been erected, on which were lanterns and tall candles. The altar was placed upon a throne surmounted with crimson curtains. Above the throne a canopy of sheets had been spread. Pictures of the crucifixion decorated the altar, and flowers had been stream about it with simple but effective taste by the Italian women. A contribution plate stood on a table near by. On a balcony covered with sheets a stringed orchestra performed airs from "Olivette" and "Biltee Taylor." Fire-crackers and rockets kept up a lively din during the night. In an adjoining yard to this, dimly lighted by two tallow candles, a bagpipe and tambourine furnished the music to which a band of Italians vent through a dance which would have done credit to a band of Kickapoo Indians. The merrymaking was kept up until late in the night, and the flithy and crowded street presented an appearance picturesque in the extreme. pearance picturesque in the extreme.

MR. HATTON'S "MISSIONARIES."

The United States Postal Guide is a monthly publication supplied by the Post Office Department to all postmasiers and employes of the Railway Mail Service. It contains postal information of interest to those in the service, including changes in post offices and money-order offices, and the orders and circulars issued in the current month by the Post Office Department. It has also some advertisements. Among the most prominent of these on the first page of the publication has recently appeared an advertisement of The Burlington Hawkeye, in which the name of Frank Hatton appears as editor-in-chief. The advertisement did not appear till Mr. Hatton had been appointed First Assistant Postmaster-General. In the first number in which it appeared Mr. Hatton had his iname printed as "Hon. Frank Hatton," but this impropriety was corrected in succeeding issues. The latter part of the advertisement reads: "The management has concluded to make large discounts to postmasters and general agents whereby they may act as missionaries without loss, and assist in benefiting mankind by increasing the circulation of The Hackeye." Inside of the pamphlet are orders signed by the "Editor-in-chief" as First Assistant Postmaster-General. The question has been asked whether postmasters are under any less obligation to obey the orders on the cover than those printed inside. MR. HATTON'S "MISSIONARIES."

He then pointed the pistol at her and discharged it, the bail entering her neck on the left side, making an ugly wound. Immediately after the shooting Enghof left the bouse. The recent report of Special Agent Brackett, who was charged with the duty of investigating the conduct of the Appraiser's Department, declared that Appraiser Howard has been guilty of violations of the Civil Service rules, and of unbecoming conduct as an officer of the Government. The Secretary of the Treasury has granted the Appraiser the privilege of replying to the report. For the first time in such cases the Secretary has directed that the reply should be submitted to the special agent, who is ordered to make a supplementary report on the reply. It has been the previous custom of the Department to allow replies only to the Secretary. This variation from the usual rule is remarked upon at the Custom House as a feature of the case unfavorable to the Appraiser.

Mr. Lane did not readily reply, and Mr. Wales insisted on an answer. Such action on the part of the Board, Mr. Wales said, would be creating a privileged class of laborers.

Mr. MacLean moved that this rate be paid, and that the Superintendent of Parks be instructed to discharge fifty-nine men next month.

Mr. Wales offered as a substitute that the men be employed ten hours a day. Both amendment and substitute were lost, and Mr. Lane's motion was tabled, after Mr. Wales remarked, indignantly:

Mr. Lane then read along arraignment of Aneurin Jones, the Superintendent of Parks. He moved for his dismissai on the ground of his extravagance and incompetency. Here the vessel and crew are subjected to a careful preliminary examination, and the cargo is disinfected with sulphurous acid twice within the forty-eight hours during which the vessel is detained there. Those that have yellow fever on board or that have come from infected ports, like Hawana or Matanzas, whether any sickness is found on board or not, are ordered to anchor at Robbin's Reef and the cargo is then discharged by lighters. After the cargo is then discharged ness is found on board or not, are ordered to anchor at Robbin's Reef and the carge is then discharged by lighters. After the carge has been discharged by means of the lighters the whole vessel is theroughly cleansed and washed in every part. Then from fifty to one hundred pounds of sulphur are set on fire in the hold and the hatches are closed, battened down and covered by heavy tarpanins. To prevent any danger of setting the vessel on fire, the sulphur is barned in iron vessels which are placed in tubs of water. There never has been an instance where this process has not proved an ladequate protection from any spread of yellow lever to this city. The discharging of the cargo by lighters exposes every part of it to the pure fresh air of the harbor, and this proves very efficient to dilute and scatter any lingering germs of infection and make it perfectly safe for the merchandise to be used in the enstomary manner in the channels of trade. This rule in regard to discharging cargo is not enforced when vessels are from ports where they could not have been exposed to the infections disease.

Havana usually making the run to this port in four days, these vessels are detained at Quarantine for twenty-four hours after their arrival. This gives ample time for a thorough inspection of the vessel, cargo and persons on board, and it would be difficult indeed for any suspicious case to ship by and get into New-York City. I do not regard yellow fever as a contagious disease. That is, I do not think that one person could take it directly from another, in the same way as scarlet fever might be contracted. But the disease infects piaces and things. A person taken with yellow fever in the city ought to be removed to Quarantine as scon as possible, before the disease has had time to intect the place where the case occurred. The wise course possible, before the disease has had time to intect the place where the case occurred. The wise course to pursue in view of the threatened invasion from some of the stricken towns in the South is to ex-ercise the greatest vigilance and promptiness to prevent any lodgment of the infection in this city."
